PART 3
Question 19 to 26

Question are based on the following passage. Read the passage carefully and choose the best answer A, B, C or D.

“You can't tell me what to do, you're not my real mother!” shrieked my seven-year-old self. My stepmother had been living with us for the past week. My biological mother had disappeared one day, leaving my three sisters and I with our father. I do not know where she went and what happened to her, and my father was not in the mood to answer questions that I dared not ask. My sisters were grown up and could take care of themselves, but I was alone, always angry, and confused.

My father had come home with this middle- aged woman, Camilia, and introduced her as my new mum. I didn't like her at all and I locked myself in my room. I didn't talk to Camilia for two weeks. I must have been a real brat. However, Camilia never raised her voice to me. Perhaps she understood that I didn't know how to react to all the sudden changes in my young life and took my childish rebellions in her stride.

Two weeks after she moved in, she made changes to my room. She hired workmen to paint the room and bought a matching new bedspread. She also replaced my dresser and wardrobe with new ones. Surprisingly, it was all to my liking. She also realised most of my clothes were old, handed down to me from my three sisters, so she bought new clothes for me. Camilia did lots of nice things for me. She enrolled me for piano lessons and taught me baking. Every day she would say that she loved me. But it wasn't enough to heal the hurt inside me. Despite feeling safe with her, I had the fear that I might one day wake up to find that she was no longer with me, just like my mother. This fear made me keep my distance from her. And I tested her, again and again, with my bad behaviour.

I started throwing tantrums and acting badly, thinking that she would hate me like all the stepmothers in the stories I read. I tried to hurt her before she could hurt me. I picked fights over little things, slammed the door and refused the food she prepared for me. I did many nasty things until she finally lost her patience and gave me a richly-deserved punishment while saying, “If your mother were here, she would have done the same!”

To my surprise, after that incident, she neither left nor treated me any differently than before. She was still the same old Camilia, who looked after all my needs calmly and with care. She did start getting stricter about certain things, though. I was so far behind in my studies that I was failing my examinations. So, Camilia was really hard on me and made me do all my homework. I wasn't allowed to watch television until I completed my homework. She never gave in to my tantrums and made me study hard until I started doing better at school. My grades improved tremendously!

Then one day, it hit me that Camilia was a different sort of person from my mother or the stepmothers in the stories. She didn't leave or mistreat me, even when I behaved badly. Most importantly, she looked after me with all the love that I needed so desperately. My fear that she would disappear one day just like my mother made me act out once in a while, but my tantrums happened less and less often. As the years passed, Camilia and I developed a special bond.

I am twenty-five years old today, a graduate of a prestigious university in Malaysia with a first-class degree. My fondest memories are of growing up under Camilia's loving care. I remember the days we would go shopping and smile when people say how we looked so much alike. I have to thank Camilia for not giving up on me and am glad she came into my life. If I have a regret, it would be that I ever said “You're not my real mother,” to the mother who loved me enough to bring me up and make me her family.

19. In the opening paragraph, why does the writer use the phrase “I dared not ask”?
- A She didn't like what was happening.
 - B She wanted to protect her father's feelings.
 - C She was scared of asking her father questions then.

20. What does the writer say about Camilia's character?
- A She was keen to be the writer's new mother.
 - B She was worried about the writer's family members.
 - C She was determined to improve the writer's manners.
 - D She was calm and patient with the writer's bad behaviour.
21. Why did the writer stay away from Camilia?
- A She felt that Camilia did not love her.
 - B She thought that Camilia might not like her.
 - C She was afraid that Camilia might leave like her mother did.

- D She did not like the changes Camilia was making to her life.
22. The phrase “She never gave in to my tantrums” in paragraph 5 means
- A Camilia tried to convince the writer to do her homework.
 - B Camilia allowed the writer to do whatever she wanted.
 - C Camilia made the writer study despite the tantrums.
 - D Camilia stopped being patient with the writer.
23. How had Camilia's strictness impacted the writer?
- A The writer performed better in her exams at school.
 - B The writer spent more time completing her homework.
 - C The writer's tantrums had no longer affected Camilia.
 - D The writer stopped watching television and focused on her studies.
24. The following are the reasons Camilia is different from the writer's biological mother except
- A she did not mistreat the author
 - B she would make the author anxious
 - C she made her feel safe and secure
 - D she gave her the love she needed
25. At the end of the text, we learn that
- A the writer has no regrets
 - B the writer does not look like Camilia
 - C the writer is grateful to have Camilia in her life
 - D the writer is happy that Camilia gave up on her
26. What is the purpose of the writer writing this article?
- A To share her memories of Camilia
 - B To show how much she appreciates Camilia
 - C To demonstrate how her life was shaped by her parents
 - D To remember the problems she faced when she was young
